I am really sorry - I told Eric I would be at Union Station by just prior to 8 and I clearly couldn't pull the book together in time. I have attached, 1) Conference Background material; 2) Proposed Q & A's; 3) Long talking points, prepared by the program; 4) Short Talking Points prepared by Dave; 5) A short briefing on a pesticide that one of the conference participants is highly critical of. I will also have someone from region 2 have these in hardcopy waiting upon your arrival for easy viewing, hopefully giving you another 45 minutes of prep time.

Here are the Boxer principles for global warming legislation released today. [REDACTED] Ex. 5 - Deliberative
[REDACTED]

Principles for Global Warming Legislation

1. Reduce emissions to levels guided by science to avoid dangerous global warming.
2. Set short and long term emissions targets that are certain and enforceable, with periodic review of the climate science and adjustments to targets and policies as necessary to meet emissions reduction targets.
3. Ensure that state and local entities continue pioneering efforts to address global warming.
4. Establish a transparent and accountable market-based system that efficiently reduces carbon emissions.
5. Use revenues from the carbon market to:
 - Keep consumers whole as our nation transitions to clean energy;
 - Invest in clean energy technologies and energy efficiency measures;
 - Assist states, localities and tribes in addressing and adapting to global warming impacts;
 - Assist workers, businesses and communities, including manufacturing states, in the transition to a clean energy economy;
 - Support efforts to conserve wildlife and natural systems threatened by global warming; and -Work with the international community, including faith leaders, to provide support to developing nations in responding and adapting to global warming. In addition to other benefits, these actions will help avoid the threats to international stability and national security posed by global warming.
6. Ensure a level global playing field, by providing incentives for emission reductions and effective deterrents so that countries contribute their fair share to the international effort to combat global warming.

NV Energy Postpones Construction of Coal Power Facility in Nevada; Plans to Expedite North-South Transmission Line

Las Vegas -- NV Energy, Inc. (NYSE: NVE) today announced that it has postponed its plans to construct a coal-fired power plant in eastern Nevada due to increasing environmental and economic uncertainties surrounding its development. The company will not move forward with construction of the coal plant until the technologies that will capture and store green house gasses are commercially feasible, which is not likely before the end of the next decade.

The company still plans to proceed with the construction of a 250-mile transmission line to electrically link northern and southern Nevada and will seek approval from the Public Utilities Commission of Nevada (PUCN) to accelerate its development. The proposed transmission line, which was part of the company's original plan for the Ely Energy Center coal plant in White Pine County, will be designed to transport electricity from renewables and other energy production facilities in both northern and southern Nevada.

Michael Yackira, president and chief executive officer of NV Energy, said, "We firmly believe the plentiful sources of renewable energy – primarily solar, geothermal and wind – that either already exist or most certainly can be developed within our state make it imperative that we press forward on an expedited basis with transmission facilities so that Nevada and its citizens can benefit from these resources as soon as possible. The company has received numerous proposals for development of renewable energy in the state and has begun investing in renewable energy projects on its own. NV Energy further expects renewable energy projects to continue in the state for years to come. Because of this, we will request the PUCN to evaluate the transmission line separate from the Ely facility so that the line can be placed into operation no later than 2012.”

The Ely Energy Center had been delayed for several years because of permitting issues. As a result, NV Energy moved forward to start construction of a 500-megawatt plant at the Harry Allen Generating Station and acquired the 598-megawatt Higgins Generating Station in order to meet existing and future electricity needs in southern Nevada. Both the Harry Allen and Higgins Generating Stations burn natural gas, as does the Tracy Generating Station in northern Nevada which was completed this past summer.

“The new natural gas plants we’ve recently added and are in the process of constructing in Nevada are more efficient than other power plants from which we were previously buying or producing power, somewhat similar to buying cars that get more miles per gallon,” Yackira said. “The result is that the overall costs of electricity today and in the years ahead will be less for our customers than they would otherwise have been by depending on the volatile markets outside of our state.”

Headquartered in Nevada, NV Energy, Inc. is a holding company whose principal subsidiaries, Nevada Power Company and Sierra Pacific Power Company, are doing business as NV Energy. Serving a 54,500-square-mile service territory that stretches north to south from Elko to Laughlin, NV Energy provides a wide range of energy services and products to approximately 2.4 million citizens of Nevada as well as approximately 40 million tourists annually.

Certain matters in this press release are forward-looking statements within the meaning of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. These statements are subject to a variety of risks and uncertainties that could cause actual results to differ materially from current expectations. These risks and uncertainties include, but are not limited to, changes in environmental laws or regulations, changes in available carbon sequestration technologies, changes in financial markets, volatility and fluctuations in the markets for natural gas and purchased power, risks related to constructing and operating renewable energy projects, transmission lines and natural gas plants, and regulatory treatment of costs associated with constructing and operating transmission lines, renewable energy projects and natural gas plants. Additional cautionary statements regarding other risk factors that could have an effect on the future performance of NV Energy, Inc., or its subsidiaries Nevada Power Company d/b/a NV Energy and Sierra Pacific Power Company d/b/a NV Energy, are contained in their respective Annual Reports on Form 10-K and/or Form 10-K/A for the year ended December 31, 2007 and in their Quarterly Reports on Form 10-Q for the quarters ended March 31, 2008,

Dear Lisa,

As we have discussed, NRDC plays a leadership role in the environmental community on matters of environmental health; our organization's Health program is staffed with medical doctors and PhD level scientists as well as lawyers with a tremendous amount of experience in the relevant statutes. You'll meet several of them at our board meeting in a couple of weeks.

Attached is a document that provides our list of top short-term priorities for EPA, FDA, and CPSC for environmental health protection. It is organized both by themes and by Agency. We are anxious to brief you and the relevant assistant administrators (once appointed) on this agenda at your earliest convenience. And I am sure some of these issues will become a topic of discussion when you join us on February 26th.

Frances

As we discussed, here is a summary of the T&I WRE issues of interest. Also, attached is a copy of the February 10, 2009, letter from Chairman Oberstar and Chairwoman Johnson which further highlights their interests.

T&I WRE Questions/Interests:

- EPA's emergency response to the TVA Kingston coal combustion waste (CCW) release;
- EPA's role in oversight of the TVA-Kingston longer-term response and how EPA plans to work with the Tennessee Dept. of Environment & Conservation (TDEC)
- NPDES permits for CCW impoundments;
- EPA's efforts to regulate CCW (nonhazardous vs. hazardous);
- Enforcement issues--the EPA/TDEC letter to TVA; statutes for possible enforcement action; classification of TVA as a Federal entity/facility; history of noncompliance at the TVA Kingston facility;
- EPA's involvement in reviewing the TVA Kingston dredging plan and issuing 404 permits;
- EPA's involvement at the TVA Widow's Creek release (This was a much smaller release. EPA conducted a brief emergency response but the site is now being addressed by the Alabama Dept. of Environmental Management.);
- Staffers expressed concern that EPA was not more involved in reviewing all of TVA's facilities for potential issues and threats of releases; and
- The status of EPA's activities to conduct a nationwide assessment of CCW impoundments.

Below is the information about the March 5th meeting. Attending from R4, Acting Regional Administrator Stan Meiberg, Tom Welborn, Chief Wetlands, Coastal and Oceans Branch & Chair of the Kingston work group, and Carl Terry, Public Affairs.

The agenda is attached. It looks like it will be a regular public meeting to discuss current sampling of air, land, and water, and a Q&A session.

I'm checking whether there will be other afternoon activities for agency staff, i.e., site tour, internal meetings, etc.

Good morning Carl. Deputy Commissioner Paul Sloan and TDEC are hosting a Roane County Community Meeting on Thursday, March 5 from 6:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m. EST at Roane State Community College in Harriman, TN. The public will be invited, and the purpose of this meeting is for state and federal agency partners to present up-to-date air, land and water findings and share next steps for our roles in cleanup and recovery at the TVA Kingston Fossil Plant ash slide site.

Paul spoke earlier this week with Tom Welborn and secured the participation of RA Stan Meiberg and other EPA Region 4 staff for that date. We were pleased that Tom also said you would be the point person to help coordinate from Region 4 as we prepare for the event.

I am attaching the DRAFT event flow for the community meeting. I welcome your review, comment and suggestions. Paul Sloan will share similar information with Stan Meiberg, and I expect Paul will ask Stan to help shape the role he and EPA want to play in this event.

Tisha Calabrese, TDEC Communications Director, will be preparing an announcement release about the meeting.

I'm also attaching a map of the Roane State Community College Campus and link to the Roane State CC Web site (www.roanestate.edu) with directions to the main campus where the meeting will be held. <http://www.rscclcc.tn.us/keyword.asp?keyword=CAMPUS&keywordSub=ROANE>

Subject: Lisa Jackson in the Netherlands

Dear Anna,

Hope all is well, I enjoyed our lunch very much. Hope we can repeat that soon!

In the meantime for your information::

You mentioned that Lisa Jackson intended to visit the Netherlands soon-- a visit unrelated to her function as head of EPA.. In the meantime I have learnt that she intends to participate in a trip to the Netherlands organized by senator Landrieu from Louisiana may 26-28. Main focus of the trip is watermanagement.

I hope that Lisa Jackson, while in the Netherlands, will also find the time to visit her counterpart-environment minister Jacqueline Cramer.

A colleague of my is in contact with your colleague Robert Goulding about this. His name was given by him by the Chief of Staff of Landrieu.

kind regards,

Hi Lee,

(b)(6)

I can't attend the 10/20 forum (I'll be out of the country). It's happening in the building next door to mine so it would have been an easy commute!

I will forward the invitation for the June 6-7 event to my scheduling staff. I am concerned that there will be conflicts of interest that will not allow me to attend. That will turn on whether DeLoitte is regulated and whether you are making a profit on the conference. I note that there is no federal cabinet representation on last year's agenda and I am wondering if that is why.

Lisa,

I hope this email finds you well.

I was speaking to a partner of mine who heads our Energy practice. Our Firm is hosting an event on Carbon on October 20 in Washington, DC. When we spoke last, you indicated an interest in what industry was thinking on Carbon. You or a designate might like to attend this event. I attach an invite.

We'd also like to invite you to be our keynote speaker at our energy conference next June 7 and 8. I attach material from this year's event so you could get an idea of topics and presenters. Among the presenters this year were Suedeen G. Kelly of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and Kristine L. Svinicki of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Let me know what you think.

Thanks.

NEW PETITION SHOWS EPA ENDANGERMENT FINDING RELIED ON

FLAWED DATA

Inhofe, Barrasso Urge Jackson to Reopen Public Comment Process

Link to Press Release

Washington, D.C.-Senator James Inhofe (R-Okla.), Ranking Member of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, and Senator John Barrasso (R-Wyo.), Ranking Member of EPW's Oversight Subcommittee, called on EPA to reopen the public process for the agency's endangerment finding for greenhouse gases in light of the finding that a crucial scientific data set was destroyed. In a petition filed by a non-profit organization, the evidence is clear that EPA is relying on scientific information for its endangerment finding that could very well be seriously flawed.

Inhofe and Barrasso recently asked EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson to respond to requests about transparency and openness in the scientific process used to develop the endangerment finding. Thus far, the agency has ignored their request. The following is the reaction from the senators to today's development:

Sen. Inhofe: "It's astonishing that EPA, so confident in the scientific integrity of its work, refuses to be transparent with the public about the most consequential rulemaking our time. Now the evidence shows that scientists interested in testing some of EPA's assertions can't engage in basic scientific work, such as assuring reproducibility and objectivity, because the data they seek have been destroyed. In order to conform to federal law and basic standards of scientific integrity, EPA must reopen the record so the public can judge whether EPA's claims are based on the best available scientific information."

Sen. Barrasso: "It's disturbing to learn that the data used for the EPA's finding no longer exists. If true, the agency needs to reopen the comment period or withdraw the rule and start over."

CLIMATE: Stabenow floats new offset proposal (11/04/2009)

Allison Winter, E&E reporter

Sen. Debbie Stabenow (D-Mich.) unveiled a long-awaited climate proposal today that would expand offset programs for farms and forestry.

Stabenow's bill, widely circulated today among environmental groups, would alter and expand some of the proposals to create incentives to reduce greenhouse gas emissions for manufacturing and agriculture.

It is expected to be "marker" legislation that indicates the direction Stabenow and other Midwestern and Western lawmakers would like the climate bill to take. Co-sponsors include the powerful Finance Chairman Max Baucus (D-Mont.) and Sens. Amy Klobuchar (D-Minn.), Sherrod Brown (D-Ohio), Tom Harkin (D-Iowa) and Mark Begich (D-Alaska).

The proposal comes as the path remains unclear for the climate bill from Sens. John Kerry (D-Mass.) and Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.). The Environment and Public Works Committee remains unable to mark up that bill this week due to a Republican boycott.

The agriculture and forestry language included in Boxer's bill was thought to be placeholder language until Stabenow, Agriculture Chairman Blanche Lincoln (D-Ark.) and other lawmakers with a more vested interest in agriculture weigh in.

Lincoln has said she plans to hold hearings on agriculture and climate issues, and she, Klobuchar and Stabenow have said they would work together to shape the farm and forestry sections of the Senate bill.

Stabenow's proposal won early praise today from some environmental and forestry groups, including the American Forest Foundation, Trust for Public Land and Environmental Defense Fund.

The proposal addresses many of the concerns raised by farm and forestry groups. It would give the Agriculture Department primary authority over domestic agriculture and forestry projects. It also sets projects that the agencies must include in their list of projects that can be used for offsets -- including reforestation, forest management and harvested wood products.

It would change the way the legislation deals with projects from "early actors," who started carbon sequestration projects on their land before development of a climate bill. The bill would give credits to projects dating back to Jan. 1, 2001, as long as they were registered under certain approved programs. Other projects must have commenced after Jan. 1, 2009, to be considered for "additional" carbon sequestration.

The bill also includes brand-new language that would allow landowners to enter into short-term contracts that could be bundled together to create a permanent offset.

Subject CLIMATE: Reid gives Boxer green light for 'nuclear option'
(11/04/2009)

The article below describes the state-of-play on the EPW climate drama. I have attached the new Graham/Gregg/Snowe/Collins letter to you that is referenced in the article.

Ex. 5 - Deliberative

11-04-09 EPW Modeling Letter.pdf

CLIMATE: Reid gives Boxer green light for 'nuclear option' (11/04/2009)

Darren Samuelsohn, E&E senior reporter

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.) has given the chairwoman of the Environment and Public Works Committee the go-ahead to advance global warming legislation by Tuesday if Republicans have not ended their boycott by then, according to three sources close to the process.

Chairwoman Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.) originally wanted to push forward tomorrow with debate and votes on amendments to the 959-page climate bill.

But the sources say Reid urged Boxer to wait until Tuesday, Nov. 10. The markup was originally scheduled to begin yesterday, but the committee's GOP members are boycotting in an effort to force U.S. EPA to further study the climate proposal.

"Makes them look like the 'party of no,'" one source said. "Makes them look frivolous."

As of press time, Boxer was huddling with EPW Committee Democrats to discuss their strategy on the climate bill over the coming days. As she entered the closed-door meeting, Boxer said she would remain in the Capitol into the evening for Republicans to return to the negotiation table.

Aides to Boxer and Reid declined comment on the schedule that Reid and Boxer discussed earlier this week. But Boxer earlier today signaled she was losing her patience with Republicans after they twice ignored her deadline for submitting amendments and also rebuffed two offers to publicly question a top EPA official about the models that the agency has already run on the House-passed bill and its Senate counterpart.

"Stay tuned," she said. "You'll know very soon."

Senate aides say Boxer plans to proceed under a rarely used interpretation of the EPW Committee's rules that allows her to start and finish the markup so long as a majority of the panel's members are present, rather than long-standing precedent requiring two minority members to be in attendance. Boxer and Democratic leaders also could use Senate Rule 14, which allows the majority to discharge legislation out of a committee and bring it directly to the floor. About 80 Democratic amendments have been submitted for the markup, but it is unclear how many will be brought up for consideration.

"Let me just say, we'll follow the rules," Boxer said today. "The rules are written in the Senate committees for reasons. And the reasons are to make sure we can do our work. Can you imagine if, and regardless of who's in charge, there's never an ability to move a bill out? That would paralyze the nation."

EPW Committee ranking member James Inhofe (R-Okla.) warned Boxer earlier not to move the climate bill in violation of the long-standing committee precedent, calling it "the nuclear option" that could disrupt progress on other legislative items. Inhofe and the other GOP committee members stayed away from this afternoon's staff-led briefing on the details of the climate bill.

But Inhofe's spokesman did stop by the hearing room to circulate a letter sent today on their behalf to EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson from four critical Republican moderates seen as potential swing votes on the floor: Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, Judd Gregg of New Hampshire and Maine's Olympia Snowe and Susan Collins.

"As senators interested in a bipartisan approach to addressing climate change and energy independence this Congress, we have a keen interest in ensuring that cost estimates, models and other data critical to the legislative process be made available to members of Congress and the public in a timely manner," the four senators wrote. "We cannot support legislation without this information."

The Republican senators' letter urged EPA to deliver the economic models on the Senate bill "prior to any action in EPW."

Graham's signature came within hours of his appearance at a press conference where he reaffirmed his role in working toward a bipartisan compromise on the climate proposal with Sens. John Kerry (D-Mass.) and Joe Lieberman (I-Conn.).

Graham told reporters he was "sympathetic" to the GOP boycott on the EPW panel, which builds off a 3-month-old request for information at EPA sought by Sen. George Voinovich (R-Ohio).

"I'd probably be where Senator Voinovich is at," Graham said. "I think he's a pretty constructive guy, and I think he's got some legitimate concerns."

But Graham also said he was trying to work with the Democrats and Obama administration on legislation that squeezes together both climate change and more supply-side energy production, including nuclear power and offshore oil and gas production.

"I hope my Republican colleagues will at least listen, come to the table as the chamber has, see where we're going, give us input, and if at the end of the day they can't support it, that's OK," Graham said.

Kerry, Graham and Lieberman touted a letter sent yesterday to Boxer and Inhofe from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce that spelled out in greater detail where it stands on the climate bill. Kerry called the chamber's letter "essential." And Graham said the group mirrors many Senate Republicans who are not quite sure where they stand on the issue.

"The chamber letter sort of reflects where a lot of people are," Graham said. "This sounds intriguing."

Senators, White House talk

The three senators also held a series of meetings today in the Capitol with Energy Secretary Steven Chu, Interior Secretary Ken Salazar and White House energy adviser Carol Browner -- all aimed at gleaning where the Obama administration stands on the critical issues at the center of the climate and energy bill.

"Our effort is to try to reach out, to broaden the base of support, beyond the committees of jurisdiction," Kerry said. "We're going to do that working very closely with the chairs of those committees, as well as members across the Senate. The key here is really to negotiate once, not negotiate with ourselves, and not negotiate just in the Senate and not have the White House also at the table."

Kerry insisted that the three senators would keep their focus on closed-door negotiations in an efforts to win over more than 60 votes on the proposal. "We're just at the beginning stage," he said. "One thing I'll say, we're not going to negotiate this publicly, day by day, drip by drip. We're going to do this in a way that maximizes the privacy of putting something like this together."

Ultimately, Kerry said he hopes to deliver a legislative package to Reid that includes input from leaders of the six Senate committees with jurisdiction over the issue, as well as members off the committees. Reid is scheduled to meet in the "next week or so" with the six chairmen, Reid spokesman Jim Manley said yesterday.

Lieberman, one of the original co-sponsors of climate legislation, said he expects the final climate bill to include significant backing for building new nuclear power plants. Nuclear industry officials are seeking several times the $18.5 billion for new plant loan guarantees that Congress has already provided and the Energy Department plans to divide among a handful of companies soon.

Lieberman declined to put a dollar figure on the new support he envisions.

Elsewhere, Lieberman cited increased streamlining of the new reactor licensing process, nuclear work force development and support for waste recycling technologies.

Compromise efforts on nuclear power will not be the subject of amendments in the EPW Committee but rather during the floor debate, he said. "I don't expect that the work we've been doing will lead anyone involved to offer amendments," Lieberman said. "It will be more part of this process, or on the floor."

W.Va. leaders seek coal answers from White House

By Ken Ward Jr.

Staff writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. -- West Virginia political leaders promised Tuesday to speak "with one voice" to clarify the Obama administration's proposals to more strictly regulate mountaintop removal coal mining.

Gov. Joe Manchin, Sen. Jay Rockefeller, and Reps. Nick J. Rahall and Shelley Moore Capito said they would join forces to seek a high-level White House meeting to raise coal industry concerns about tougher permit reviews instituted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"It's about the economy of West Virginia," Manchin said at a news conference after a two-hour, closed-door meeting with industry leaders. "We're just trying to find that balance right now."

Rockefeller said the White House meeting doesn't have to involve President Obama, but must be with someone who can provide "good, hard information" about exactly what new environmental constraints EPA wants to place on mountaintop removal.

Rahall said coal executives at Tuesday's meeting expressed frustration with EPA permit reviews, delays in permit decisions and general confusion about what -- if any -- new standards EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson is imposing on Clean Water Act permits for strip mines.

"We need to know what the rules of the game are," Rahall said. "We need clarity. We need EPA to get its act together."

Capito, the only Republican member of the state's congressional delegation, said the state would be more successful in working with EPA if officials from both parties are involved.

"I think unified voices are always louder and stronger," said Capito, who complained EPA has canceled two private meetings she had scheduled with Jackson to discuss permit review issues.

Representatives of Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., also attended the meeting, but did not speak during the news briefing that followed. Rep. Alan Mollohan, D-W.Va., did not attend, and apparently no one from his staff came in his place.

Manchin called the high-level meeting at the request of Logan County Commissioner Art Kirkendoll, who complained that EPA permit reviews -- including the potential veto of the largest mountaintop removal permit in West Virginia history -- are hurting his county's economy and tax base.

"All we need to do is find out if it's qualifiable," Kirkendoll said. "If it's the right kind of permit, let us go to work."

Top Manchin staffers, county commissioners from various coalfield counties, and several United Mine Workers union representatives joined more than a dozen top coal industry executives for the meeting. The event was moved at the last minute from a public conference room in the Capitol to a private tent structure set up adjacent to the Governor's Mansion for social events. Additional State Police troopers were on hand, but there was no sign of any anti-mountaintop removal protesters.

Paul Vining, president of Patriot Coal Co., said the industry worries that EPA permit reviews and any new standards limiting water quality impacts will have "far-reaching impacts" not just on mountaintop removal, but also on underground mining and coal-waste impoundments.

Vining said large-scale layoffs aren't not imminent, but that industry officials are concerned about long-term matters if they don't find out exactly what EPA's new standards are going to be.

"We're very concerned about our employees in the long term," Vining said. "It may not be next week or next month."

Brett Harvey, president of CONSOL Energy Inc., agreed.

"There has been a change and we would like to know what the rules are," Harvey said.

EPA officials did not immediately provide comment on the meeting.

Hi All:

Attached is a letter from the State Voice group urging the House to protect EPA authority to regulate GHGs under the CAA. We are also working with CA and the S 177 states to pull together a letter that highlights the potential impact that such efforts might have the national agreement on GHG standards for cars. Hopefully we can get that out this week.

CLIMATE: Murkowski to discuss EPA 'endangerment' action with U.S. Chamber members (02/19/2010)

Anne C. Mulkern, E&E reporter

Republican Sen. Lisa Murkowski of Alaska will join a U.S. Chamber of Commerce conference call next week to talk to chamber members about U.S. EPA's plan to regulate greenhouse gas emissions, an event an environmental group attacked and Murkowski's office cast as routine.

The senator, who plans to offer a resolution aimed at hobbling EPA's action on greenhouse gases, will talk to chamber members next Thursday, according to what appears to be an invitation to the call. The invitation was made available to E&E. The chamber and Murkowski spokesman Robert Dillon confirmed that the event will take place.

"Join in this worthwhile opportunity to hear an overview of the EPA's move toward regulating greenhouse gases under the Clean Air Act, its burdensome affects on business, and Congress' response to the move," the invitation says.

"Senator Murkowski has introduced bipartisan legislation to allow time for Congress to address the climate change issue and prevent EPA from moving forward with a regulatory scheme to regulate greenhouse gases under the ill-suited framework of the Clean Air Act," the invitation adds. "On January 14, the first major step of that process -- an EPA final rule concluding that greenhouse gases endanger public health and welfare -- took effect, and with it the obligation to move forward with what could easily become the most expensive and intrusive set of regulations in history," the invitation adds. "The implementation of these rules will have a significant impact on the economy and small businesses."

Murkowski plans to circumvent the committee process with her measure that would effectively veto EPA's finding that greenhouse gases endanger human health and welfare. EPA's determination opens the door for rules aimed at slashing emissions from a broad range of sources, including oil refineries and utilities. Her spokesman has said Murkowski is concerned about the economic effects of using the Clean Air Act to regulate greenhouse gases.

"The chamber had asked her to talk to some of their members who are concerned about EPA regulation," Dillon said. "She talks to a lot of groups. This is just one invitation."

"The resolution's already written. It's already introduced," Dillon added. "I don't see how you can say she's doing the bidding of big business when she's going to talk to them about what her concerns are."

The Sierra Club criticized both Murkowski and the chamber.

"It just shows that she's willing to align herself with the most extreme, anti-science elements of the biggest, most extreme lobbyists in Washington," Sierra Club spokesman Josh Dorner said. "What's behind the curtain here are big-time corporate special interests and polluters."

The chamber has a lot of small-business members, Dillon said. In addition, he added, environmental groups are attacking Murkowski's character to avoid a debate about the actual issue of whether EPA should regulate carbon emissions.

"This is a part of an ongoing grass-roots outreach to our members that involves discussions of topical issues that are of concern to the business community and their efforts to create jobs in this tough economy," said chamber spokesman Eric Wohlschlegel.

Wohlschlegel added that "the U.S. Chamber strongly supports efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions in the atmosphere, but we believe there's a right way and a wrong way to achieve that goal. The wrong way is through the EPA's endangerment finding, which triggers Clean Air Act regulation. Because of the huge potential impact on jobs and local economies, this is an issue that requires careful analysis of all available data and options."

Environmental groups already have attacked what they see as Murkowski's alignment with corporate interests. News reports earlier this year revealed that Jeff Holmstead, an industry lawyer who served in the George W. Bush administration, advised Murkowski's office on a failed amendment last year to block EPA regulations.

Environmentalists have pointed to Holmstead's involvement as a signal that Murkowski is working on behalf of industry interests. Murkowski has said her staff consulted a variety of outside experts, including environmentalists and Republican and Democratic lawmakers, when drafting that amendment.

Sen. Murkowski: Disapproval Resolution Best Safeguard to Economy

WASHINGTON, D.C. - U.S. Sen. Lisa Murkowski, R-Alaska, today released the following statement on Democratic senators' letter to the Environmental Protection Agency regarding the economic threat of greenhouse gas regulations:

"Last Friday, eight Democratic senators sent a letter to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) describing many of the same concerns I have been raising about that agency's attempt to impose back-door climate regulations under the Clean Air Act.

"I welcome my colleagues' attention to this issue, and am encouraged that they share the concerns of the 41 Democratic and Republican senators who have introduced a disapproval resolution (S.J.Res.26) to halt EPA's actions. This bipartisan measure was made necessary by the agency's decision to finalize the endangerment finding without addressing a number of problems related to it.

"Fortunately, the Congressional Review Act provides a small window of opportunity for Congress to disapprove of EPA's finding. The disapproval resolution remains the best opportunity for senators to weigh in, prior to EPA regulating, on whether or not they are comfortable with EPA instituting massive new regulations in the midst of the worst economic downturn in modern times. It is a simple issue: Senators either support EPA imposing these regulations without input from Congress, or they don't."

"Congress remains the appropriate body to develop climate policy. Having evaluated and pursued other options to respond to EPA's proposed regulations in the past, I'm convinced that alternatives to the disapproval resolution will face a difficult path forward. Economically damaging regulations will be no more acceptable at some later date.

"I commend my colleagues for becoming more engaged in this important issue and hope they will show their commitment by signing on as co-sponsors of the disapproval resolution. It's time to take the threat of EPA's command-and-control regulations off the table."

Administrator
Environmental Protection Agency
Ariel Rios Building

Mail Code: 1101A
Washington, DC 20460

Dear Lisa:

We would be honored if you would join us as a keynote speaker at Ceres Conference 2010: Roadmap for a Sustainable Future, to be held May 5 - 6 at the Renaissance Hotel in Boston. Your participation with and support of BICEP has been invaluable in recent months, as Ceres has worked hard to bring together corporate and government leaders to support forward thinking climate policy. Ceres has a long history of working with the EPA and other government bodies to promote real, lasting change and it would be wonderful to have you join us for Ceres' signature annual event. I know that our audience of business leaders, investors, and activists would be eager to hear your thoughts on how we can collectively move forward an agenda for future change and impact.

Ceres has partnered with these key stakeholders to bring about these dramatic changes, and continues to work hard to integrate sustainability into business strategy and long-term shareholder value. Next spring we will once again bring our partners together to engage in dialogue and examine the key issues and solutions that will keep us all moving forward. We hope that you will be part of that conversation.

The 2009 Ceres Conference, held in San Francisco, brought together close to 600 thought leaders from the business, investment, and environmental communities. Highlights from this year's gathering include:

- Celebrating Ceres' 20th Anniversary with a special dinner featuring actor and activist, Robert Redford.
- Visionary keynotes compelling us to act now and act boldly—including Bullitt Foundation president and Earth Day founder, Denis Hayes; Lester Brown, founder and president of the Earth Policy Institute; and Peter Darbee, CEO of PG&E.
- A compelling conversation between senior executives of Nike, Google, Jones Lang LaSalle, and the Assistant Comptroller for Pension Policy of NYC exploring what it means to be a sustainable company in the 21st century and how concepts like sustainable consumption, open sourcing, and the acceleration of clean energy technologies will get us there.

I can be reached by phone at (617) 247-0700 x130, or by email at lubber@ceres.org if you have any questions about the Ceres Conference 2010. Thank you for your consideration of our invitation; I hope to see you in Boston in the spring.

With best regards,

Your leadership has been crucial in these momentous times. I hope you will consider joining us in May —

Chris and Alex,

Attached please find a letter to Senators Reid and McConnell that is being faxed to your office today from nine state environmental commissioners in states that have adopted the California GHG standards for passenger vehicles. The letter addresses the concern that the Resolution of Disapproval proposed by Senator Murkowski of the US EPA's Endangerment finding for greenhouse gases (GHGs) would prevent EPA from finalizing federal GHG standards for passenger vehicles.

Without a US EPA standard, the "harmonized state-federal vehicle standards" program worked out between the states, federal government, and auto companies could not occur. Our states would still enforce our separate standards, and auto companies would need to comply with both state GHG standards and national fuel economy standards, instead of the single compliance pathway the harmonized program offers.

We wanted to make sure that Senator Reid and his colleagues were aware of this regrettable outcome if the Murkowski resolution were to go forward.

Please don't hesitate to let me know if you have any questions or if I can be of any assistance.

Subject: California Clean Cars states on Murkowski resolution

Chris and Alex,

Attached please find a letter to Senators Reid and McConnell that is being faxed to your office today from nine state environmental commissioners in states that have adopted the California GHG standards for passenger vehicles. The letter addresses the concern that the Resolution of Disapproval proposed by Senator Murkowski of the US EPA's Endangerment finding for greenhouse gases (GHGs) would prevent EPA from finalizing federal GHG standards for passenger vehicles.

Without a US EPA standard, the "harmonized state-federal vehicle standards" program worked out between the states, federal government, and auto companies could not occur. Our states would still enforce our separate standards, and auto companies would need to comply with both state GHG standards and national fuel economy standards, instead of the single compliance pathway the harmonized program offers.

We wanted to make sure that Senator Reid and his colleagues were aware of this regrettable outcome if the Murkowski resolution were to go forward.

Please don't hesitate to let me know if you have any questions or if I can be of any assistance.

Murkowski Delays Vote on Resolution Blocking EPA From Regulating Emissions

Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska) will not bring her resolution to block the Environmental Protection Agency from regulating greenhouse gas emissions to the Senate floor before the spring recess and will use the extra time to determine whether a competing approach that would only delay EPA action holds more promise, Senate aides said March 12.

"Due to the ongoing health care debate and Sen. [Jay] Rockefeller's proposal for a two-year timeout" of EPA action toward regulating stationary sources, Murkowski "will likely hold off for now in seeking a vote" on her proposal, according to Murkowski spokesman Robert Dillon.

Dillon stressed that the Alaska senator "is not withdrawing her disapproval resolution" and reserves the right to bring it to the floor at the time of her choosing over the coming months.

"She remains concerned about the economic threat posed by EPA regulation of greenhouse gases, and she fully intends to seek an up or down vote on the issue," Dillon said.

Murkowski's approach (S.J. Res. 26) would rely on streamlined procedures included in the 1996 Congressional Review Act for overturning unpopular federal rules. It allows opponents to vote down a regulation with a simple majority of 51 votes instead of the 60 usually needed to overcome a filibuster threat.

The Alaska senator had hoped to offer the resolution on the floor before the Senate recess slated to begin the last week of March (37 DEN A-14, 2/26/10).

But Murkowski is still shy of the votes for her measure, having garnered 40 cosponsors—including three Democrats, Sens. Blanche Lincoln (Ark.), Ben Nelson (Neb.) and Mary Landrieu (La.)—since introducing her measure in February. Even if she is successful in the Senate, her resolution would need to be approved in the House and signed by President Obama, which is considered unlikely.

Senator to Gauge Progress on Alternative Approach

But Murkowski also is taking a wait-and-see approach to determine whether a more modest alternative offered by Sen. Jay Rockefeller (D-W.Va.) gets traction. Introduced March 4, Rockefeller's bill (S. 3072) would delay EPA regulatory action for two years and affect only its authority to regulate power plants and other stationary sources. The bill would also leave EPA rules on vehicle emissions untouched (42 DEN A-1, 3/5/10).

Murkowski's spokesman said the senator "will wait and see how Sen. Rockefeller progresses on his proposal."

"However, if there appears to be no other way to stop the EPA, Senator Murkowski will call up the disapproval resolution for a vote," Dillon said.

Other Republican Senate aides familiar with Murkowski's strategy said the senator is likely to wait as long as possible before deciding whether to bring her resolution to the floor. "More likely you won't see anything until June," one Republican aide said.

Specifically, Murkowski's resolution would nullify EPA's December finding that greenhouse gases endanger public health and welfare, which would underpin the agency's regulation of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gas emissions under the Clean Air Act.

Under the CRA, a resolution of disapproval must be offered on the Senate floor no later than 60 "session" days after a final rule has been transmitted to Congress. But days in which either the House or Senate are adjourned for more than three days are not counted against the 60-day deadline. Murkowski's staff has calculated that she could offer the resolution on the floor well into May and perhaps early June before hitting that deadline.

Kentucky Department for Environmental Protection Modifies 27 Pending Water Quality Permits for Coal Mining Agreement reached on process to monitor water quality in coal mining areas FRANKFORT, Ky. – (March 19, 2010) – The Kentucky Department for Environmental Protection (DEP) today announced it is moving forward with the issuance of 27 pending water quality permits for mining operations following an extensive review process. The reviews centered on results from changes made in the Clean Water Act 402 permits by DEP. The modifications were negotiated as a result of concerns expressed by EPA during the permit review process. The concerns addressed by those comments are incorporated into the permits being issued by the Division of Water.

“This action today is a strong indication that everyone involved in this process recognizes the need to safeguard our environment while still meeting the energy and economic needs of Kentucky,” said Gov. Steve Beshear. “This collaborative effort that allowed all interested parties to work toward a viable solution demonstrates the concern that we all have in making certain coal is mined properly and that all environmental issues are addressed.”

In January of this year, the Kentucky Energy and Environment Cabinet, through DEP and the Department for Natural Resources (DNR), announced new protocol to minimize impacts on streams from mining operations while maintaining Approximate Original Contour (AOC). This collaborative effort between DNR, the federal Office of Surface Mining, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the mining industry, and environmental interests was formalized as the Fill Placement Optimization Protocol (FPOP) in a Reclamation Advisory Memorandum (RAM 145).

“The Reclamation Advisory Memorandum has been a key element in making this process work,” said Energy and Environment Cabinet Secretary Len Peters. “We must continue the diligent work of monitoring the streams that could be impacted by any mining operation and following this protocol is essential to that success.”

Kentucky Coal Association President Bill Bissett applauded the signing of the water permits.

“The coal producers in Kentucky are prepared to work with federal and state agencies to make certain the process works for everyone’s best interest. The approval of these 27 permits is a clear indicator that these coal companies have met these more stringent guidelines and that the process does work,” said Bissett.

The Cabinet intends to process other pending coal mining Kentucky Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (KPDES) individual permits over the course of the next several weeks as information is received and reviewed. These permits will contain Kentucky's proposed changes in response to the EPA comments on the initial 27 public-noticed CWA 402 permits. CWA 402 permits are issued and reissued with a term of five years.

Hi Rob,

Let me know how you want to go about doing this. I'm sending some background in this email re: the meeting that a group of states are holding at which we would welcome Lisa's participation. If you want to work via email, that's cool. I'm also happy to conf. call with folks on your end, including Lisa, to discuss it. Alternately, I'm happy to jump on a train to meet with Lisa to walk her through it which would give me an opportunity to touch base with some folks in DC anyhow. I'll follow your lead on how to proceed.

In the U.S. states have demonstrated their leadership in developing innovative climate change policies and programs. With or without federal climate legislation, states will continue to develop and implement cutting-edge greenhouse gas reduction programs. The Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative (RGGI) proved how effective a multi-disciplinary collaboration can be when state environmental and energy agencies came together to limit emissions from power plants. Throughout the northeast and mid-Atlantic, the transportation sector accounts for upwards of 30% of greenhouse gas emissions. States and localities have jurisdiction over land use and many transportation related decisions. A transportation collaboration is a natural next steps for states in the northeast and mid-Atlantic to build upon their their past and ongoing innovations at the state and regional level with regards to climate change policy.

To begin this collaborative effort, a group of northeast and mid-Atlantic states are holding a summit in June 2010 to "kick off" the beginning of what is expected to be a three year initiative focusing on addressing greenhouse gas emissions in the transportation sector. The Summit will include energy, environment and transportation Agency Heads from all ten RGGI states plus Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia and it will coincide with the annual meeting of The Northeast Association of State Transportation Officials (NASTO). The purpose of the June 2010 summit is to bring together transportation, energy and environmental Agency Heads in the RGGI region to consider policies and initiatives to assist states in meeting an economy-wide Greenhouse Gas Reduction goal of (approximately) 80% reduction of Greenhouse Gases by 2050 and related interim goals. The participating states voluntarily seek to collaborate to find ways to improve energy efficiency in all areas of the transportation system while improving the efficiency of transportation systems, promoting innovative clean transportation technologies of the future and improving the economies of the participating states. This is indeed an exciting event and quite groundbreaking. It is hard to imagine having it without Lisa being there, quite frankly.

It is expected that the result of the Summit will include execution of a MOU among the transportation, energy and environmental agency heads of the participating states in which the agency heads will: commit to core principals; agree to maintain an ongoing dialogue with a subsequent meeting in September; establish a staff working group among the states which will be directed to develop and implement a three month and three year workplan; and agree to undertake several immediate demonstration projects.

I have attached two documents. Please treat both confidentially. The first is a "color coded" composite agenda of a series of meetings that the states will be participating in on June 14-15 in Wilmington, DE. Meetings include the NASTO meeting, RGGI Agency Head "business" meeting, parts of the NASTO meeting where current RGGI Agency Heads will participate and the Summit which will begin on Tuesday, June 15 with a lunch and proceed until the end of that day. The second attachment is an overview of the collaboration that is unfolding among the states regarding climate initiatives in the transportation sector. As you can see from this second document, our intend is to begin the actual "Summit" with several provocative lunchtime speakers on Tuesday, June 15 afterwhich the transportation, energy and environmental Agency Heads will meet in working sessions to develop their their plan for moving forward.

We believe that this inaugural meeting of this new state collaboration would be made even more exciting if Administrator Jackson and Secretary LaHood were able to, together, join us as the lunchtime speakers on Tuesday, June 15 to "kick off" the states' summit. Our hope would be that the two could address the states' Agency Heads regarding the promise and opportunities presented by state collaboration on addressing climate change in the transportation sector and to discuss the federal perspective that would support and encourage state policies and action in this regard.

We have begun to reach out to Secretary LaHood's office regarding his interest and availability to participate but, clearly, if Lisa were willing and available to participate, we would certainly appreciate her help in reaching out to Secretary LaHood to encourage his participation as well.

Please note that we are finding that there is significant interest in this Summit outside of state agencies so we are working hard to keep information about it as controlled as possible. Please do not share this documents and we'd appreciate your discretion about discussing it outside the agencies.

David, I wanted you to see the attached response from David Crane to the Administrator's March 24th letter encouraging a dialogue regarding the impact of greater environmental regulation on business and economic growth. Mr. Crane would be very interested in meeting with the Administrator on the issue in general, and in helping facilitate, if possible, a more in-depth dialogue between her and key investors who specialize in power sector stocks. We spend a lot of time with many of this fairly concentrated set of players, and believe that there would be significant benefits from a greater understanding in this space of EPA's objectives and concerns.

I'd be interested in your thoughts on this, as well as any suggestions about next steps for arranging a Crane – Jackson meeting.

thanks

Hi Joe. From ALA's statement below, it appears that there are assaults on section 112 for non-GHG and assaults on NSR/PSD for non-GHG lurking in the Kerry-Lieberman draft. Could you see if someone in OAR could find out from Nancy K-C exactly what they are and exactly where they appear in the document?

Thanks,

Statement of Charles D. Connor, President and Chief Executive Officer, American Lung Association
On the Kerry-Lieberman Bill, The American Power Act

Washington, DC. May 12, 2010. We at the American Lung Association were shocked to read language included in the draft American Power Act introduced today by Senators John Kerry and Joseph Lieberman that would unleash a dangerous process to attack life-saving rules on coal-fired power plants and threaten to permit much more air pollution around the nation. The outrageous proposal creates an open door through which millions of tons of life-threatening pollution could be allowed to flow. We oppose these provisions. The American Lung Association cannot support legislation that includes changes to the Clean Air Act that undermine the protection of public health. We urge the Senate to strip such unnecessary and objectionable language from any bill. Burning coal creates particle pollution and key components of ozone. Both pollutants can kill. Pollution from these power plants is considered to cause nearly 24,000 early deaths each year through their toxic impact on the lungs and other parts of the body. Both pollutants cause wheezing, coughing, asthma attacks; both send children to the emergency room and people with lung disease to the hospital. Particle pollution causes heart attacks and strokes and may lead to lung cancer. These are lethal substances, recognized as such by repeated scientific review.

Particle pollution and ozone aren't the only pollutants targeted under the bill as proposed—just the most widespread. The draft bill invites attack on safeguards applying to a horde of other noxious emissions, known under the Clean Air Act as hazardous air pollutants, which include mercury, arsenic, lead and other toxics. Cleaning up the air pollution from coal-fired power plants has long been a priority for the American Lung Association—and for the U.S. Congress. In 1990 in the Clean Air Act, Congress gave the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the states clear mandates to require the cleanup of emissions from major sources like these power plants because of the enormous harm those emissions do to public health. In response, the electric utility industry has spent decades fighting those protections in court and in the regulatory process. We have urged EPA to clean up these plants and the agency has now begun to do so.

Provisions in this draft bill create an irresponsible process to roll back tools every community needs to protect its most vulnerable residents – children, seniors and those with chronic diseases – against dangerous air pollution. Specifically we are concerned about provisions that:

- Create a “study” group that would authorize the “review” and re-writing of rules currently in place that communities need to protect the lives and health of their citizens.
- Give the electric power industry a new venue to seek weakening of cleanup rules indefinitely based on claims of reliability and job loss, while conveniently ignoring the deaths and other health effects caused by their spewing smokestacks.

The American Lung Association will undertake a careful review of the draft legislation and we will communicate any additional concerns to the Senate.

We urge the Senate to reject any legislation that weakens the health protections of the Clean Air Act.

Subject: French dispersant report, etc.

Dear Lisa and Al,

Yesterday was very productive, thank you so much. As promised, I am attaching the CEDRE research report on the use of dispersants in France as well as CEDRE's list of dispersants for use in open sea.

Also as promised, I am attaching a map of the 15 coastal communities that the CHART applied research center has been working with for the past 6-8 years. These communities should definitely be included in the environmental reporting network that we talked about on the bus. I am working with NRDC to obtain funding for community-based sampling centers that I hope to establish in some of these communities using a model I developed for New Orleans after Katrina (i.e., people's environmental centers). As we discussed, all environmental monitoring efforts will be coordinated with Region VI and with the LA Bucket Brigade so sampling results can be made available using their online map.

FYI, since Sunday, CHART has been convening meetings in the coastal communities between Louisiana natives and Alaska natives who were impacted by the Exxon Valdez spill. Tomorrow's meetings, which will also include Cajun communities, may get national news coverage from CBS and ABC. CHART, with support from NOAA, has also established a resource website for coastal communities affected by the oil spill: communitiesonthehorizon.org.

Also attached is the agenda for the CNREP conference to be held in New Orleans this Thursday and Friday. You may recall we discussed this briefly yesterday. Just about every local expert on the gulf coast is attending the CNREP conference, so the list of speakers alone should be valuable in terms of identifying local experts.

Thank you for your leadership!

highest regards,

-E

Chamber of Commerce
OF THE
United States of America

R. Bruce Josten
Executive Vice President
Government Affairs

1615 H Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20006
202/463-5310

June 8, 2010

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE:

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the world's largest business federation representing the interests of more than three million businesses and organizations of every size, sector, and region, strongly supports S.J. Res. 26, crucial bipartisan legislation sponsored by Sens. Murkowski and Lincoln, which would prevent the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) from moving forward with its scheme to regulate greenhouse gas emissions under the Clean Air Act because of the enormous permitting and compliance costs EPA regulation would force upon businesses large and small.

There is significant consensus that the Clean Air Act is an imprecise, impractical, and unworkable process to regulate greenhouse gas emissions. Yet, EPA's "endangerment finding" triggered a burgeoning regulatory onslaught of costly, burdensome regulatory programs, such as:

- Mandatory New Source Performance Standards, set by sector;
- New Source Review and Prevention of Significant Deterioration permits for new or modified major sources;
- Title V operating permits for an escalating number of emitters; and,
- National Ambient Air Quality Standards, a program so incompatible with greenhouse gases that EPA has concluded it would be virtually impossible to implement.

The endangerment finding expands the regulatory universe under the Clean Air Act from a few thousand to to almost six million. Many of these newly-regulated entities would have their costs of doing business escalate due to new rules and requirements, and projects stalled or stopped while they apply and wait for complicated new permits that require strict and expensive control technologies. Entities affected are not just power plants and refineries, but also potentially office buildings, small businesses, private schools, nursing homes, churches, and other small emitters.

The Congressional Review Act provides Congress with needed checks and balances to undo unwise and unwarranted Administration regulatory actions. Simply put, S.J Res. 26 is the only effective way to stop the consequences of the endangerment finding.

Other purported endangerment "fixes" are illusory, impractical, and potentially illegal. EPA may attempt to promulgate a rule ostensibly intended to address ancillary impacts of the endangerment finding; such a regulation is likely to be invalidated by the courts. Bills that have been or may be introduced in the House or Senate to amend the Clean Air Act may be well intentioned; they will not and cannot mitigate, block, deflect or undo EPA's oncoming regulatory onslaught as effectively as S.J. Res. 26.

Support for S.J. Res. 26 should not be misrepresented as a vote against greenhouse gas emissions legislation. The Chamber supports efforts to address energy security and climate change, and believes that any legislation must be comprehensive and bipartisan, and take into account a wide spectrum of issues including American jobs and our environment.

The Chamber urges you to approve S.J. Res. 26, the bipartisan Congressional Review Act Resolution of Disapproval. The Chamber will consider votes on, or in relation to, this issue in our annual How They Vote scorecard.

Sincerely,

R. Bruce Josten

CLIMATE: Enviro groups wary of trade-offs in push for utility-only bill

(Wednesday, July 14, 2010)

Robin Bravender, E&E reporter

Electric utilities are pushing for what they call a "predictable road map" for federal air pollution rules in order to sign on to a Senate climate bill, making environmentalists wary that senators will give away too much in order to seal the deal.

Key senators and members of the utility industry are working behind the scenes to reach an agreement on legislation that would impose caps on power plants' greenhouse gas emissions as part of a broader climate and energy package. Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.) hopes to send a bill to the floor the week of July 26.

As talks intensify, environmentalists are urging lawmakers to reject any efforts to weaken Clean Air Act standards for pollutants beyond carbon dioxide, which they say the industry will demand in order to get its buy-in.

"It's definitely one of the sticking points," said Nathan Willcox, Environment America's federal global warming program director. Willcox said he has heard from Senate staff that utilities are looking to weaken certain provisions of the Clean Air Act in utility-only climate legislation.

"Regulatory relief" is the friendly-sounding term that is being tossed around by a lot of staffers as to what they're hearing from the utilities," Willcox said. "But if regulatory relief means that we're weakening standards for pollutants that kill people, that is a big problem."

Environment America was one of 31 advocacy groups that sent a letter to senators today opposing "proposals that would preempt, delay or weaken Clean Air Act standards for pollutants such as ozone, particulate pollution, mercury, arsenic, lead and other toxics from power plants."

The groups specifically expressed concerns about provisions in the sweeping cap-and-trade bill from Sens. John Kerry (D-Mass.) and Joe Lieberman (I-Conn.) that would create a task force to explore how federal and state environmental programs would affect the ability of coal-fired power plants to lower their greenhouse gas emissions (E&E Daily, May 13, 2010). They also criticized a provision in an energy efficiency bill from Sen. Richard Lugar (R-Ind.) that would exempt utilities from some regulations as incentive to retire the most-polluting power plants.

But Duke Energy Corp. spokesman Tom Williams disputed claims that the industry is looking to weaken pollution standards.

"What we're mainly after is clarity," Williams said. "It's not to strengthen or weaken; clearly, we need things that are doable and achievable, but most importantly, we need a predictable road map." Duke Energy is one of the handful of utilities that have publicly stated their support for a "utility first" measure to limit the sector's carbon dioxide emissions.

The electric power industry is facing a host of new air pollution regulations from the Obama administration, including a draft rule aimed at slashing soot- and smog-forming pollution from power plants and strict ozone standards that are expected to soon be finalized.

"Sensible policy should include incentives for new emissions-free nuclear power, renewable energy and carbon capture and storage for coal plants," Williams said. "It must also clarify federal emissions regulations so electric utilities can shift to cleaner and more efficient power plants without the uncertainty of patchwork regulatory approaches and the threat of litigation."

Sen. Tom Carper (D-Del.) is planning to offer his three-pollutant, or 3-p, bill as an amendment to Reid's energy bill aimed at offering utilities certainty on soot, smog and mercury emissions, Carper said yesterday. U.S. EPA is expected to soon finalize rules dealing with power plants' emissions of those pollutants, but some in the industry are wary that they will be tossed out in court.

One of the things utilities want is certainty, Carper said. "And you know when you're a utility company making these huge investments -- nobody's built a new coal plant for years -- you're thinking about making these investments that cost tens of millions of dollars, it's nice to have some certainty."

The American Chemistry Council today announced its opposition to a utility-only bill, warning that it would raise energy prices across the economy.

"Such proposals will raise energy prices, including natural gas feedstock costs, and in turn harm the global competitiveness of America's chemical industry, stall our economic recovery and stifle job creation," said ACC President and CEO Cal Dooley in a statement.

"Another troubling aspect of a utility-focused cap-and-trade program is that it leaves open the possibility of new regulatory requirements developed by EPA outside of a national climate policy," Dooley added. "The proposals pre-empt EPA regulation of utilities, while allowing the regulation of 'uncapped' industrial and commercial sources."

Kerry has said he is optimistic that lawmakers could strike a deal with the industry on a climate bill. "I think one could work out some formula that appeals to industry," Kerry told reporters earlier this week. "I think there's something hopefully we'll be able to do that moves in the right direction."

Hi Michelle –

Good catching up with you the other day, and exciting to hear about EPA's innovative thinking on tribal relations

A copy of this memo just came across my desk – it outlines the 404C veto issue that I mentioned as top of mind for many of the communities in Bristol Bay. I believe it was sent to the Region 10 administrator, so perhaps you've already seen it

Have a good trip – watch out for the bugs this time of year!

Aileen!

So great to hear from you. I am well, and would love to talk with you tomorrow or Thursday. Lakita will set it up.

Congratulations on the EGA presidency! Well deserved.
Speak soon,
Michelle

Hi Michelle –

I hope this note finds you happy and well in DC

I understand that you will soon be making the rounds in Alaska, meeting with folks on the Bristol Bay issue among others.

As you can imagine, the folks in the native and commercial fishing communities in the Bay are anticipating EPA's visit with great excitement (though I worry, with potentially unrealistic expectations about the potential outcomes). I'm sure you have heard from many resources on the issues, but if you would be interested in a brief chat before your trip please let me know. Would be happy to share some perspectives, or connect you directly to local resources that can be helpful.

Heard from Danielle that you might be able to join us this fall at Asilomar – hope we'll have a chance to see you there!

Best,
Aileen

Dear Friends – sad but true. The US Solicitor General, acting on behalf of TVA, has asked the US Supreme Court to vacate the Second Circuit victory we earned in 2009. See attached. The SG had full authority to prevent TVA from filing anything in the Supreme Court but instead has chosen to side with America's biggest greenhouse gas polluters even as EPA dithers about whether to regulate coal fired power plant emissions from existing power plants.

We will push on against our latest adversary – the United States government. Our brief is currently due in early October. Stay tuned.

Subject: EPA to Take Action on Power Plant Emissions in the Face of Pressure from Tort Lawsuit

Dear Friends of the Global Warming Legal Action Project:

Well things are getting interesting. A few weeks ago the Obama Administration opposed our lawsuit against major GHG emitters. (See NYT article below). Today the Washington Post published an editorial saying Obama was right. (See below below). The Post gets the timeline backwards – suggesting that lawsuits like ours would make sense only later on if EPA fails to act and/or if Congress takes away EPA's authority to act. Actually, injunctive relief lawsuits under federal tort law like Connecticut versus EPA make a lot of sense unless such time as EPA takes serious action to regulate power plant emissions and Congress declines to undermine such EPA action. Which brings me to the next thing:

Apparently EPA will be using next week's anniversary of the Clean Air Act (Sept 14) to announce a timetable for regulating existing power plant GHG emissions. This is welcome news. And my understanding from various sources is that our public nuisance lawsuit has put the Obama Administration under substantial pressure to get this done. Hopefully EPA will take stringent action and whatever Congress we have come January will leave EPA alone. We shall see.

Meantime I need to get back to drafting our opposition to the defendants' petition seeking Supreme Court review.

Best to all,

Matt

Obama Admin Urges Supreme Court to Vacate Greenhouse Gas 'Nuisance' Ruling

By GABRIEL NELSON of Greenwire

The Obama administration has urged the Supreme Court to toss out an appeals court decision that would allow lawsuits against major emitters for their contributions to global warming, stunning environmentalists who see the case as a powerful prod on climate change.

In the case, AEP v. Connecticut, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals sided with a coalition of states, environmental groups and New York City. The decision, handed down last year, said they could proceed with a lawsuit that seeks to force several of the nation's largest coal-fired utilities to reduce their greenhouse gas emissions.

The defendants -- American Electric Power Co. Inc., Duke Energy Corp., Southern Co. and Xcel Energy Inc. -- filed a petition for review with the Supreme Court earlier this month, asking the court to reject the argument that greenhouse gas emissions can be addressed through "public nuisance" lawsuits (Greenwire, Aug. 4).

In a brief (pdf) filed yesterday on behalf of the Tennessee Valley Authority, acting Solicitor General Neal Katyal agreed with the defendants, saying that U.S. EPA's newly finalized regulations on greenhouse gases have displaced that type of common-law claim.

Katyal urged the court to vacate the decision and remand the case to the 2nd Circuit for further proceedings, this time taking into account the administration's push to regulate greenhouse gases under the Clean Air Act.

The 2nd Circuit's decision rested on the assertion that "EPA does not currently regulate carbon dioxide," but that has since changed. The Obama administration has finalized several regulations in response to the Supreme Court's 2007 decision in Massachusetts v. EPA, which told the agency to decide whether greenhouse gases were pollutants under the Clean Air Act.

"Since this court held in 2007 that carbon dioxide falls within that regulatory authority, EPA has taken several significant steps toward addressing the very question presented here," Katyal wrote. "That regulatory approach is preferable to what would result if multiple district courts -- acting without the benefit of even the most basic statutory guidance -- could use common-law nuisance claims to sit as arbiters of scientific and technology-related disputes and de facto regulators of power plants and other sources of pollution both within their districts and nationwide."

Matt Pawa, an attorney representing plaintiffs in the case, said he and his colleagues expected the White House to stay out of the matter. During a meeting with more than 30 administration lawyers at the solicitor general's office on June 24, it seemed they had "a lot of friends in the room," he said.

"We feel stabbed in the back," Pawa said. "This was really a dastardly move by an administration that said it was a friend of the environment. With friends like this, who needs enemies?"

Top attorneys at environmental advocacy groups are buzzing about the brief, sources say. Some feel betrayed by a White House that has generally been more amenable to environmental regulation than its predecessor.

"This reads as if it were cut and pasted from the Bush administration's briefing in Massachusetts," said David Bookbinder, who served as the Sierra Club's chief climate counsel until his resignation in May.

Climate and common law

Nuisance claims, a long-standing fixture of common law, are more often used to settle disputes with neighbors than to address an issue as wide-reaching as global warming. In the absence of congressional action, environmental groups say, such lawsuits could be used to make businesses, or anyone else, pay for the effects of their emissions.

Critics, including many industry groups, say the claims would lead to an inefficient and unfair jumble of litigation.

Two other similar cases are already working their way through the federal courts. In the 9th U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals, briefing is under way in Native Village of Kivalina v. Exxon Mobil Corp. , while the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals recently reinstated a district court's decision to dismiss Comer v. Murphy Oil , which was brought by Hurricane Katrina victims.

Because the White House supports legislation to limit greenhouse gas emissions, many attorneys expected the Obama administration to avoid criticizing a ruling that could become so disruptive that it would force Congress to take action. Jonathan Zasloff, a law professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, said in a recent blog post that the White House would undermine its goals by siding with utilities.

If the Supreme Court does not take the case, he wrote, "then the only way to get rid of the suit is for Congress to displace it. And the only way for Congress to displace it is to pass legislation. As is the case with EPA authority to regulate carbon, this puts more bargaining power on the side that wants regulation."

Though the Supreme Court agrees to hear less than 1 percent of all petitions for review, a brief from the solicitor general tends to grab justices' attention. The court could decide as soon as this fall whether to review the case.

Richard Faulk, chairman of the environmental practice at Gardere Wynne Sewell LLP, said industry groups want the Supreme Court to review and overturn the 2nd Circuit's decision, but they would be fairly content if the justices followed the administration's suggestions.

"So far, the petitioners haven't asked that the case be remanded back, but it's hard for me to imagine that anyone would be really disappointed if the Supreme Court decided to do that," Faulk said. "People would like to see the case reversed, but having it sent back for further deliberation is certainly a better result than having the result affirmed."

President Obama is right to back lawsuit of carbon emissions

Tuesday, September 7, 2010; A14

ENVIRONMENTALISTS were unhappy with President Obama after climate legislation foundered in the Senate. A week and a half ago, their blood came to an even more vigorous boil after the administration sided with the Tennessee Valley Authority, a federal entity, in a lawsuit over power plant carbon emissions. This left enviros wondering aloud about what had happened to a president who made reversing the rising of the oceans a campaign promise.

Mr. Obama deserves some criticism for his handling of climate legislation. But his administration's decision on this case, Connecticut v. American Electric Power, is more than defensible.

In 2004, a group of states and New York City sued several large electric utilities, charging that the greenhouse emissions their power plants produce were a "public nuisance" because they contributed to global warming, which harmed those jurisdictions. A district court refused to hear the case, saying that it involved questions best left to the political branches of government. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 2nd Circuit disagreed, arguing that the political branches hadn't developed a policy on carbon emissions; so the states could appeal to common law, which allows for nuisance claims. The Obama administration filed a brief on Aug. 26 with the Supreme Court, which might hear the case. The administration pointed out that since the Second Circuit's ruling, the Environmental Protection Agency has nearly completed preparations to regulate greenhouse emissions from utilities under the Clean Air Act. As long as it addresses the nuisance the states identified -- and the administration makes a good argument that it does -- that policy displaces common law, the legal basis of the suit.

Setting aside the legal technicalities, these sorts of cases are not the best way to reduce America's carbon emissions. Pursuing separate torts against different emitters will result in a patchwork of judicial mandates in lieu of comprehensive regulation, the nature, scale and expense of which will no doubt depend on which judge hears each case. EPA regulation, too, has deficiencies, including the possibility that different presidents will apply it inconsistently. But it's more predictable, and it's universal.

Still, environmentalists rightly worry that the White House won't ever allow the EPA's prepared rules to come into force, given high political opposition to EPA carbon regulation. Congress may also try to strip the EPA of its ability to regulate. If the administration declines to regulate, after all -- or if Congress forces the EPA to desist -- the plaintiffs will have better grounds and better reason to sue than they do now.

Gov. Gregoire's statement on dismissal of lawsuit challenging Governor's executive order on climate change

OLYMPIA – Gov. Chris Gregoire today issued the following statement on the decision to dismiss a lawsuit challenging the governor's executive order on climate change:

“I was delighted, but not surprised to learn that a lawsuit challenging my May 2009 executive order on climate change has been dismissed.

“The plaintiffs, who were represented by attorneys for the Evergreen Freedom Foundation, dropped the litigation in the wake of a Superior Court ruling on Oct. 8 that Executive Order 09-05 directs agencies to do work that is well within their authority, and mine. It has long been established law that an executive order may be a directive from the governor communicating to state agencies what the governor wants the agency to accomplish. I do not understand why this lawsuit was brought. I also don’t understand why they waited more than a year after the order was issued to take action.

“This is a win for Washingtonians. It allows our state agencies to get on with their important work of reducing the very real impact of greenhouse gas emissions. The dismissal also means we will not be forced to spend more taxpayer dollars to defend our agency work against plaintiffs’ attempts to obtain a court injunction. Meanwhile, the agencies are nearing completion of the work that I directed them to do through my Executive Order. I couldn’t be more pleased with the result of the order and the dismissal of this litigation.”

The EO directed several state agencies to:

- Consult with companies that emit 25,000 metric tons of greenhouse gases or more each year in developing emission strategies and industry benchmarks to help meet the state’s greenhouse gas reduction targets.
- Work with TransAlta to develop a voluntary agreement to significantly reduce greenhouse gas emissions from the company’s coal-fired power plant near Centralia.
- Work together with forest landowners to develop recommendations for a forestry offset program and other financial incentives for the forestry and forest products industry.
- Recommend whether or not the state should adopt a low-carbon fuel standard to reduce carbon emissions from the transportation sector.
- Join with neighboring states to obtain federal funding to implement a West Coast highway accessible to electric and alternative-fuel vehicles.
- Develop guidelines to address rising sea levels and the risks to water supplies.
- Formulate plans to increase transit options, such as buses, light rail, and ride-share programs, and give Washington residents more choices for reducing the effect of transportation emissions.
- Continue to work with six other Western states and four Canadian provinces in the Western Climate Initiative to develop a regional emissions reduction program.
- Work with the Obama Administration and the state’s Congressional delegation to help design a national emission reduction program that is strong and reflects state priorities.

David:

Happy New Year. Hope you had a great holiday. Attached is a copy of a letter sent by the Alliance to Chairman Issa earlier today. I have no doubt this letter will be the source of significant angst for some, so I wanted to send it to you myself and state clearly what it does not mean. It does not mean that we are in any way reneging on the agreement that was reached on a national program for 2012-2016. It also does not mean that we are backing away from the process we committed to last May to continue the national program for 2017-25. All we are saying – clearly and publicly – is that we do not believe that California’s announced plan to proceed with its own standards ahead of the federal process is appropriate or in keeping with the spirit of the President's direction last May. Feel free to call me if you want to discuss further. FYI, we do not plan to release the letter until tomorrow afternoon, and then only if asked.

David:

Happy New Year. Hope you had a great holiday. Attached is a copy of a letter sent by the Alliance to Chairman Issa earlier today. I have no doubt this letter will be the source of significant angst for some, so I wanted to send it to you myself and state clearly what it does not mean. It does not mean that we are in any way reneging on the agreement that was reached on a national program for 2012-2016. It also does not mean that we are backing away from the process we committed to last May to continue the national program for 2017-25. All we are saying – clearly and publicly – is that we do not believe that California’s announced plan to proceed with its own standards ahead of the federal process is appropriate or in keeping with the spirit of the President’s direction last May. Feel free to call me if you want to discuss further. FYI, we do not plan to release the letter until tomorrow afternoon, and then only if asked.

Subject: Report on Utility Air Toxics Coming out tomorrow

Gina,

We are releasing tomorrow a report Toxic Air: The Case for Cleaning Up Coal-fired Power Plants, to help the public understand the long-overdue need to clean up emissions of hazardous air pollutants from coal-fired power plants in the electric grid. In addition, we are releasing the white paper that formed the basis of that report, Emissions of Hazardous Air Pollutants from Coal-fired Power Plants, prepared for us by Environmental Health & Engineering, Inc. in Boston. Both and the press release are attached. They can be accessed after 5 AM tomorrow from our website at www.LungUSA.org/ToxicAirReport. You will note that by coincidence, the lead researcher in the E H& E team is David MacIntosh, Sc.D. who is in no way related to the current member of EPA's esteemed team.

If you have questions, please let me, Paul Billings or Peter Iwanowicz know.

Thanks,
Janice
