SEPA United States Environmental Protection Agency

Water Sector Interdependencies: Critical services and key businesses rely on a resilient water infrastructure

Manufacturing Plant

Elevated Water

luseum

Power Plant

Water Storage

Can

Storage Tank

College Train/Bus Station Residences

Drinking water Treatment Facility

Wastewater

Treatment

Facility

Surface Water Reservoir/Dam

School

Ailitary Base

Community-Based Water Resiliency The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has launched the Community-Based Water Resiliency (CBWR) initiative to increase the understanding of how community services rely on drinking water and wastewater systems. EPA provides tools and resources to increase the overall preparedness of communities in the event of a water service disruption.

Office of Water (4608T) EPA 817-H-10-002 July 2010 http://water.epa.gov/infrastructure/watersecurity

Pharmaceutical

Plant