Case Summary

- Cristian Tejada, a.k.a. Christian Alberto Tejada Corporan, was last known to reside in the Bronx, New York. After working as a local auto mechanic and emissions inspector in New York City, Tejada started an online business identified as Sincere Auto Scan Inc which sold automotive parts and devices, including motor vehicle simulator devices, a.k.a. emissions emulators or OBD II simulators.
- Tejada admitted that, from on or about early 2009 through March 2013, he conspired to violate the Clean Air Act (CAA) by buying and selling various motor vehicle simulator devices throughout the United States. The simulators were intentionally designed, programmed, sold, mailed and used to fraudulently bypass motor vehicle emission inspections.
- Tejada pleaded guilty to one count of Title 18, U.S.C., Section 371, Conspiracy to violate the CAA/defraud the US Government, in the Northern District of New York (NDNY).
- In November 2014, Tejada failed to appear for sentencing in the NDNY, and a Bench Warrant was issued for his arrest.
