Area of Expertise: My research aims to determine the impact of air pollutants and their sources on inhalation exposures at the personal, residential and community scales for analyses of human health effects. I was previously a Principal Investigator in EPA's World Trade Center study, which investigated the composition, transport and health effects of dust and other air pollution resulting from the aftermath of the September 11 attacks.

My current research collaborations focus on next generation air monitoring devices and understanding and managing public health risks associated with wildland fires.
