Hi Mike,

I hope you're doing well and enjoying the new year! I just wanted to share some press that we've been working on since the Once In Always In withdrawal was issued yesterday. We are working on some statements of blog posts, but for now, we're mentioned in this article as a group that wanted the repeal. WE certainly appreciate it and I'll share any more press of ours as it comes through.

Please let me know if you need anything from me!

Sure thing, here are some questions. Thanks for working with me on this, Liz. And thanks, Bill, for being so open during a difficult confirmation process.

Bio questions:

- Could you provide a quote or two about your origins in Delaware, meeting your wife, moving here in 1988, pursuing a legal education at Widener and ultimately a new career? Could you offer any details about your upbringing in Memphis?
- In your current position, do you commute to your Washington D.C. office on Amtrak's Acela, or by car? If you go by train, do you ever chat with Delaware's members of Congress on the way down? Or, even Joe Biden?
- In our newspaper's somewhat-dated voter database, records show you as a political independent. Do you identify with any party?

Regulation questions:

- An ongoing air quality issue in Delaware relates to pollution from so-called "upwind" states. Should the 2008 national ozone standard be more strictly enforced on states that are upwind of Delaware, such as Pennsylvania?
- How will you negotiate regulating the actions of people you have worked with in the private sector? Do you worry about being too personally familiar with officers of companies that you will regulate? To be clear, I'm not asking about recusing yourself from cases you have directly worked on, as those ethical rules are pretty straightforward, but about future regulatory actions that impact companies and their officers with whom you may be friendly.

Do you think human activity is the primary driver of climate change? Do you think the effects of climate change include longer fire seasons in western forests, more severe hurricanes, sea level rise, or acidification of oceans?

What do you think are any of the other effects of climate change? How should regulators price those effects, which may be decades away?

President Trump has dismissed climate change as threat numerous times before entering the White House. How will you operate under a boss who appears to disagree with an operating premise of many regulators?

Do you think the Clean Air Act is designed to regulate carbon emissions? Should Congress pass a new law to regulate those emissions? Should it place a direct price on carbon emissions?

Do you think the Obama Administration accurately estimated the financial toll of climate change?

What do you think will be the differences between how you run the EPA office compared with your predecessor under the Obama administration?

-Can you respond to critics in Congress, such as Sen. Merkley who said you embody a “Koch Brother-inspired determination not to acknowledge even the most fundamental facts” about a relationship between carbon dioxide and global warming?

Sure thing, here are some questions. Thanks for working with me on this, Liz. And thanks, Bill, for being so open during a difficult confirmation process.

Bio questions:

- Could you provide a quote or two about your origins in Delaware, meeting your wife, moving here in 1988, pursuing a legal education at Widener and ultimately a new career? Could you offer any details about your upbringing in Memphis?
- In your current position, do you commute to your Washington D.C. office on Amtrak's Acela, or by car? If you go by train, do you ever chat with Delaware's members of Congress on the way down? Or, even Joe Biden?
- In our newspaper's somewhat-dated voter database, records show you as a political independent. Do you identify with any party?

Regulation questions:

- An ongoing air quality issue in Delaware relates to pollution from so-called "upwind" states. Should the 2008 national ozone standard be more strictly enforced on states that are upwind of Delaware, such as Pennsylvania?
- How will you negotiate regulating the actions of people you have worked with in the private sector? Do you worry about being too personally familiar with officers of companies that you will regulate? To be clear, I'm not asking about recusing yourself from cases you have directly worked on, as those ethical rules are pretty straightforward, but about future regulatory actions that impact companies and their officers with whom you may be friendly.

Do you think human activity is the primary driver of climate change? Do you think the effects of climate change include longer fire seasons in western forests, more severe hurricanes, sea level rise, or acidification of oceans?

What do you think are any of the other effects of climate change? How should regulators price those effects, which may be decades away?

President Trump has dismissed climate change as threat numerous times before entering the White House. How will you operate under a boss who appears to disagree with an operating premise of many regulators?

Do you think the Clean Air Act is designed to regulate carbon emissions? Should Congress pass a new law to regulate those emissions? Should it place a direct price on carbon emissions?

Do you think the Obama Administration accurately estimated the financial toll of climate change?

What do you think will be the differences between how you run the EPA office compared with your predecessor under the Obama administration?

-Can you respond to critics in Congress, such as Sen. Merkley who said you embody a "Koch Brother-inspired determination not to acknowledge even the most fundamental facts" about a relationship between carbon dioxide and global warming?

Sure thing, here are some questions. Thanks for working with me on this, Liz. And thanks, Bill, for being so open during a difficult confirmation process.

Bio questions:

- Could you provide a quote or two about your origins in Delaware, meeting your wife, moving here in 1988, pursuing a legal education at Widener and ultimately a new career? Could you offer any details about your upbringing in Memphis?
- In your current position, do you commute to your Washington D.C. office on Amtrak's Acela, or by car? If you go by train, do you ever chat with Delaware's members of Congress on the way down? Or, even Joe Biden?
- In our newspaper's somewhat-dated voter database, records show you as a political independent. Do you identify with any party?

Regulation questions:

-An ongoing air quality issue in Delaware relates to pollution from so-called “upwind” states. Should the 2008 national ozone standard be more strictly enforced on states that are upwind of Delaware, such as Pennsylvania?

-How will you negotiate regulating the actions of people you have worked with in the private sector? Do you worry about being too personally familiar with officers of companies that you will regulate? To be clear, I’m not asking about recusing yourself from cases you have directly worked on, as those ethical rules are pretty straightforward, but about future regulatory actions that impact companies and their officers with whom you may be friendly.

Do you think human activity is the primary driver of climate change? Do you think the effects of climate change include longer fire seasons in western forests, more severe hurricanes, sea level rise, or acidification of oceans?

What do you think are any of the other effects of climate change? How should regulators price those effects, which may be decades away?

President Trump has dismissed climate change as threat numerous times before entering the White House. How will you operate under a boss who appears to disagree with an operating premise of many regulators?

Do you think the Clean Air Act is designed to regulate carbon emissions? Should Congress pass a new law to regulate those emissions? Should it place a direct price on carbon emissions?

Do you think the Obama Administration accurately estimated the financial toll of climate change?

What do you think will be the differences between how you run the EPA office compared with your predecessor under the Obama administration?

-Can you respond to critics in Congress, such as Sen. Merkley who said you embody a “Koch Brother-inspired determination not to acknowledge even the most fundamental facts” about a relationship between carbon dioxide and global warming?

API welcomes EPA action to promote science-based regulations

WASHINGTON, October 31, 2017 – API today welcomed actions by EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to promote science-based regulations by naming a broad and diverse membership of scientific advisors to EPA’s Board of Scientific Counselors, Science Advisory Board and Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee.

“Smart, science-based regulations are essential to our nation meeting its energy and environmental needs well into the future,” said API Senior Director for Regulatory and Scientific Affairs Howard Feldman. “Administrator Pruitt’s actions today advance the administration’s commitment to promoting American energy production, transportation, refining, and use while protecting the environment.

“We look forward to our continued work with the administration and Congress on promoting a regulatory system, based on sound science and data, that creates American jobs and grows our economy while protecting public health and the environment.”

API is the only national trade association representing all facets of the oil and natural gas industry, which supports 10.3 million U.S. jobs and nearly 8 percent of the U.S. economy. API’s more than 625 members include large integrated companies, as well as exploration and production, refining, marketing, pipeline, and marine businesses, and service and supply firms. They provide most of the nation’s energy and are backed by a growing grassroots movement of more than 40 million Americans.

Good morning, Michael.

Maryland Infrastructure magazine has asked for a column from NSSGA on the recent fly-in. We would like to include the quote from Administrator Pruitt that was approved for our member publication earlier.

The draft article is attached for your review, please let me know if the quote is okay and if you have any other edits.

“Regulatory reform does not mean a dearth of regulations. It means that we are going to go about things consistently, and regulations are intended to make things regular. The greatest impediment to economic growth has been regulatory uncertainty. If agencies change the rules of engagement over and over, that affects the economy and businesses substantially,” Pruitt said. “At the end of the day, farmers, ranchers, businesses, community groups and states all care about the water they drink and air they breathe.”

Focusing on one regulation, the controversial Waters of the United States rule, Pruitt said that no longer would a puddle be considered under the EPA’s jurisdiction. “What’s coming next is a replacement definition that matches the intent of the Clean Water Act using objective criteria so we know where federal jurisdiction begins and ends.”

Quarries Rocking Capitol Hill

Nearly 300 people from aggregates operations all over the country went to Washington, D.C. for NSSGA's first-ever Legislative & Policy Forum/Fall Board Meeting. The four-day event was full of professional development sessions, committee meetings, networking and a full day of face-to-face meetings with lawmakers on Capitol Hill. There were more than 175 meetings in the offices of senators and representatives where engineers, managers, equipment operators and CEOs discussed the need for a serious investment in our nation's transportation infrastructure.

We are so excited that so many people took it upon themselves to advocate for our industry. If we do not continue to talk about the issues affecting our operations, no one else will. We will build on this incredible event so that we can have even more meetings on Capitol Hill and let Congress know that when the aggregates industry is doing well, America is doing well.

We were also glad to welcome a dozen members of Congress to the event. Each talked about the importance of investing in our infrastructure. The benefits are tangible at every level, from fixing potholes on local streets, to repairing bridges that carry hundreds of vehicles per day, to ensuring that commuters and commerce travels between states.

After all, we know that interstates do not end at state borders. Interstates 81, 83, 95 and 270 bring friends and families into the state as well as customers and tourists who spend time and money in the state.

There are thousands of hard-working people in Maryland who produce the crushed stone, sand and gravel necessary to improve our crumbling and congested infrastructure. Recent studies show that every job in a quarry supports nearly five outside the operation in other industries, like construction and trucking.

With that in mind, we were glad to hear from Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt remark on the burdens that regulations have on our country's businesses, especially when regulations are not based on common sense or sound science.

"Let's say you have a stream that includes trout and salmon, and there's dam upstream and irrigation downstream. To get permits, you have to address the salmon with the Commerce Department, the trout with Fish and Wildlife, the dam is regulated by the Army Corps of Engineers and the irrigation is regulated by the Bureau of Reclamation," Secretary Zinke said. "It's never too late to look at what we're doing and do it better."

Pruitt said that establishing consistency when it comes to regulatory enforcement is a top priority. "Regulatory reform does not mean a dearth of regulations. It means that we are going to go about things consistently, and regulations are intended to make things regular. The greatest impediment to economic growth has been regulatory uncertainty. If agencies change the rules of engagement over and over, that affects the economy and businesses substantially,"

Pruitt said. “At the end of the day, farmers, ranchers, businesses, community groups and states all care about the water they drink and air they breathe.”

Focusing on one regulation, the controversial Waters of the United States rule, Pruitt said that no longer would a puddle be considered under the EPA’s jurisdiction. “What’s coming next is a replacement definition that matches the intent of the Clean Water Act using objective criteria so we know where federal jurisdiction begins and ends.”

The Trump administration has proposed to rescind the 2015 Obama administration rule and intends to issue a new and less onerous one, yet the court still needs to address whether a District or Appeals Court would have jurisdiction to hear lawsuits against WOTUS rule. This is because NSSGA filed a lawsuit to stop the rule and joined with 32 states and other business groups to oppose the WOTUS rule on constitutional, procedural and legal grounds.

The rule would have dramatically expanded federal jurisdiction over dry streambeds and isolated wetlands. Such a jurisdictional overreach would have impacted the permitting process for aggregates operations and increased the cost of vital public works projects with little to no environmental benefit.

While these were welcome words from senior government officials, they and their agencies can only implement so much change on their own.

We need to support candidates for elected offices who know and support the value of aggregates operations, construction companies and every business related to building our communities and infrastructure. It also means that we need to invite our lawmakers – from mayors to senators – into our operations and job sites on a regular basis. There is simply no better way to demonstrate how many jobs are impacted when our country invests in our roads, bridges, highways and public works projects, than with in-person visits.

Please visit www.nssga.org/advocacy to find out how you can help advocate for the aggregates and construction industries.

Emissions have plunged 25 percent without proposed "Clean Power Plan"

WASHINGTON, October 10, 2017 – API President and CEO Jack Gerard welcomed action by EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to address the flawed "Clean Power Plan."

"Even without the Clean Power Plan's implementation, our nation has reduced greenhouse gas emissions from power generation by 25 percent since 2005 thanks to the increased use of clean, reliable, and affordable natural gas," said Gerard. "Even as we have become the world's top producer and refiner of oil and natural gas, carbon emissions are near 25-year lows throughout our nation's economy."

"Market forces and technological innovation have driven the increased use of natural gas which has brought great benefits to American consumers, workers, and the environment. We look forward to our continued work with the Administration and Congress on policies that advance our nation's economic and environmental goals."

API is the only national trade association representing all facets of the oil and natural gas industry, which supports 10.3 million U.S. jobs and nearly 8 percent of the U.S.

economy. API's more than 625 members include large integrated companies, as well as exploration and production, refining, marketing, pipeline, and marine businesses, and service and supply firms. They provide most of the nation's energy and are backed by a growing grassroots movement of more than 40 million Americans.

API welcomes nomination of Andrew Wheeler to be EPA Deputy Administrator

WASHINGTON, October 5, 2017 – API President and CEO Jack Gerard welcomed President Trump’s nomination of Andrew Wheeler to be Deputy Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

“Andrew Wheeler will bring a wealth of valuable career experience to EPA. From his work on federal regulatory and legislative issues both on and off Capitol Hill, Andrew knows how important smart, science-based regulations are to the growth of the American economy, creating American jobs, and protecting our environment. Further, Andrew understands the important role that natural gas and oil play in the daily life of Americans across the nation from powering homes and schools to making life-saving medical devices.

“Andrew and I have known and worked with each other for several years. He will be a great addition to Administrator Pruitt and the highly qualified team he has assembled at EPA. We look forward to working with Andrew in his new role on policies that continue our nation’s global leadership in the production of oil and natural gas and in the reduction of carbon emissions.”

It appears there is a discrepancy in the anticipated comment period length for the reform announced today.

I noticed in the pre-publication Federal Register Notice, as well as the press release posted at the EPA web address listed in the email, a comment period of 30 days is provided. The email announcement (text below) references a comment period of 60 days.

EPA Administrator Pruitt Proposes Cost-Benefit Analysis Reform

WASHINGTON (June 7, 2018) - Today, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) issued an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) to announce that the Agency is soliciting public input on whether and how to change the way it considers costs and benefits in making regulatory decisions.

"Many have complained that the previous administration inflated the benefits and underestimated the costs of its regulations through questionable cost-benefit analysis," said EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. "This action is the next step toward providing clarity and real-world accuracy with respect to the impact of the Agency's decisions on the economy and the regulated community."

Multiple EPA-related statutes refer to the calculation of costs and benefits, but implementation has been inconsistent. As a result, EPA has created a risk of uncertainty and confusion for states, local communities, and industry. EPA is now considering ways to codify common-sense, best practices for cost-benefit analysis in rulemaking.

Through the ANPRM, EPA will seek comments and input for the Agency to consider in developing any subsequent proposed rule. EPA will take comments on the ANPRM for 60 days after publication in the Federal Register.

Background:

Under the leadership of President Trump, EPA has taken steps to improve EPA's cost-benefit calculations. Consistent with the President's Executive Order 13783, EPA updated the social cost of carbon to reflect prior and best practices. While the Obama EPA estimated the social cost of carbon to be an average of $36 per ton of carbon dioxide emitted, this EPA calculated an average of $5 per ton.

EPA has also proposed a different approach to analyzing on co-benefits - benefits from reduced emissions of a pollutant that is not the actual target pollutant of a regulation. Particulate matter was the co-benefit most cited by the Obama EPA. In fact, particulate matter co-benefits accounted for more than 80% of the purported benefits of all of Obama's air rules. The Clean Power Plan (CPP), a rule aimed at carbon dioxide reductions, derived most of its benefits from a reduction in particulate matter. When EPA issued its proposed repeal of CPP, it provided a transparent account of the impact of the rule on the "targeted pollutant" - carbon dioxide.

Earlier this morning, the Wall Street Journal published an editorial on Administrator's Pruitt's efforts to "stop the EPA's numerical shenanigans" and reform cost-benefit analysis at the Agency.

Subject: MD Infrastructure Magazine article for approval

Good morning, Michael.

Maryland Infrastructure magazine has asked for a column from NSSGA on the recent fly-in. We would like to include the quote from Administrator Pruitt that was approved for our member publication earlier.

The draft article is attached for your review, please let me know if the quote is okay and if you have any other edits.

"Regulatory reform does not mean a dearth of regulations. It means that we are going to go about things consistently, and regulations are intended to make things regular. The greatest impediment to economic growth has been regulatory uncertainty. If agencies change the rules of engagement over and over, that affects the economy and businesses substantially," Pruitt said. "At the end of the day, farmers, ranchers, businesses, community groups and states all care about the water they drink and air they breathe."

Focusing on one regulation, the controversial Waters of the United States rule, Pruitt said that no longer would a puddle be considered under the EPA's jurisdiction. "What's coming next is a replacement definition that matches the intent of the Clean Water Act using objective criteria so we know where federal jurisdiction begins and ends."

Quarries Rocking Capitol Hill

Nearly 300 people from aggregates operations all over the country went to Washington, D.C. for NSSGA's first-ever Legislative & Policy Forum/Fall Board Meeting. The four-day event was full of professional development sessions, committee meetings, networking and a full day of face-to-face meetings with lawmakers on Capitol Hill. There were more than 175 meetings in the offices of senators and representatives where engineers, managers, equipment operators and CEOs discussed the need for a serious investment in our nation's transportation infrastructure.

We are so excited that so many people took it upon themselves to advocate for our industry. If we do not continue to talk about the issues affecting our operations, no one else will. We will build on this incredible event so that we can have even more meetings on Capitol Hill and let Congress know that when the aggregates industry is doing well, America is doing well.

We were also glad to welcome a dozen members of Congress to the event. Each talked about the importance of investing in our infrastructure. The benefits are tangible at every level, from fixing potholes on local streets, to repairing bridges that carry hundreds of vehicles per day, to ensuring that commuters and commerce travels between states.

After all, we know that interstates do not end at state borders. Interstates 81, 83, 95 and 270 bring friends and families into the state as well as customers and tourists who spend time and money in the state.

There are thousands of hard-working people in Maryland who produce the crushed stone, sand and gravel necessary to improve our crumbling and congested infrastructure. Recent studies show that every job in a quarry supports nearly five outside the operation in other industries, like construction and trucking.

With that in mind, we were glad to hear from Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt remark on the burdens that regulations have on our country's businesses, especially when regulations are not based on common sense or sound science.

"Let's say you have a stream that includes trout and salmon, and there's dam upstream and irrigation downstream. To get permits, you have to address the salmon with the Commerce Department, the trout with Fish and Wildlife, the dam is regulated by the Army Corps of Engineers and the irrigation is regulated by the Bureau of Reclamation," Secretary Zinke said. "It's never too late to look at what we're doing and do it better."

Pruitt said that establishing consistency when it comes to regulatory enforcement is a top priority. "Regulatory reform does not mean a dearth of regulations. It means that we are going to go about things consistently, and regulations are intended to make things regular. The greatest impediment to economic growth has been regulatory uncertainty. If agencies change the rules of engagement over and over, that affects the economy and businesses substantially,"

Pruitt said. “At the end of the day, farmers, ranchers, businesses, community groups and states all care about the water they drink and air they breathe.”

Focusing on one regulation, the controversial Waters of the United States rule, Pruitt said that no longer would a puddle be considered under the EPA’s jurisdiction. “What’s coming next is a replacement definition that matches the intent of the Clean Water Act using objective criteria so we know where federal jurisdiction begins and ends.”

The Trump administration has proposed to rescind the 2015 Obama administration rule and intends to issue a new and less onerous one, yet the court still needs to address whether a District or Appeals Court would have jurisdiction to hear lawsuits against WOTUS rule. This is because NSSGA filed a lawsuit to stop the rule and joined with 32 states and other business groups to oppose the WOTUS rule on constitutional, procedural and legal grounds.

The rule would have dramatically expanded federal jurisdiction over dry streambeds and isolated wetlands. Such a jurisdictional overreach would have impacted the permitting process for aggregates operations and increased the cost of vital public works projects with little to no environmental benefit.

While these were welcome words from senior government officials, they and their agencies can only implement so much change on their own.

We need to support candidates for elected offices who know and support the value of aggregates operations, construction companies and every business related to building our communities and infrastructure. It also means that we need to invite our lawmakers – from mayors to senators – into our operations and job sites on a regular basis. There is simply no better way to demonstrate how many jobs are impacted when our country invests in our roads, bridges, highways and public works projects, than with in-person visits.

Please visit www.nssga.org/advocacy to find out how you can help advocate for the aggregates and construction industries.

Michael and Tate –

Good afternoon! Looking forward to having the Administrator speak to our members on Monday, Sept. 25.

Wanted to be sure to connect you with our communications team of Bailey and Patrick so that you can coordinate and get answers to any questions you might have from your end.

Thanks again!

NSSGA
