Dear Clark County Environment and Sustainability Director Marci Henson,

The Southern Nevada Building Trades Unions strongly support the All-In Home and Building Improvement Hub project in Clark County's application for the EPA's Climate Pollution Reduction Grant. Over the past two years, we've collaborated on Southern Nevada's Climate Action Plan, including a recent contractor listening session with the County's Department of Environment and Sustainability.

Since 2020, Clark County's All-In initiative has been developing a Community Sustainability and Climate Action Plan. This effort, supported by community organizations like ours, aims to create sustainable jobs with prevailing wages. The All-In Home and Building Improvement Hub, central to these goals, will offer resources for water and energy efficiency improvements, reduced utility costs, and enhanced indoor air quality. Representing 19 construction unions and over 20,000 local Nevadans, we're eager to contribute to this program's success. Our focus is on designing a program that maximizes opportunities for union members and residents interested in apprenticeship programs, aligned with the region's needs and climate.

We look forward to collaborating with Clark County, All-In stakeholders, and sustainability professionals to achieve these shared objectives. Together, we'll enhance household efficiency, create quality jobs, and reduce greenhouse gas emissions regionally. In solidarity,

Vincent Saavedra
